

KNOW YOUR RIGHT OF WAY

2-Way Stop

Cars facing a 2-way stop sign must stop and yield to traffic on the thru street, and may only proceed when safe. If 2 vehicles arrive at the same time, usually you must yield to whichever car stopped and entered the intersection first. If you stop at the same time and one wants to go straight and one wants to go left, the one going left should yield to the one going straight. Sometimes people wave each other thru. While this is a nice gesture, try to avoid this as you may be held partially liable in the event of a crash. And if it happens on your road test and someone waved, it may cost your license. If you want to let the other car go first, let him know by staying stopped at the line and look at him, rather than inching forward and looking left and right as if you're preparing to make a move.
